

	Staff at our school want to make sure everyone is happy and treated well by others
	That means noticing when children and young people are not happy and listening to their worries
	And noticing when someone needs help and support with something
	It also might mean telling another person to make things better
	You may be worried about something that happened at home
	You may be worried about something that happened at school
	You may be worried about something that happened when you were on the internet

	You might see an picture that upsets you or someone could say or text something that hurts your feelings
	You may be worried about something that happened while you are out or at someone else's house
	If this happens, you should tell someone you trust
	You should always tell someone if you are worried even if someone else tells you not to
	Mrs Allen, Mrs McDermott or Mr Hudson would be good people to talk to
	You can also talk to a teacher, or anyone else in the school
	Adults at the school will try to help you and will try to make things better
